MINES OF THE COEUR D'ALENES

Mining Men See New Diamond Drill

Demonstrations Being Conducted in District; Light Machine Can be Operated by One Man.

Demonstrating a light diamond drill, the result of over a year of development, R. S. McClintock and J. J. Coen of the Mitchell Diamond Drill Manufacturing company with headquarters in San Francisco, Calif., are in the district and expect to remain at least two weeks more.

McClintock, who is chief of the factory in Spokane and Coen, field engineer with 16 years experience in diamond drilling in the mining districts of the north and southwest, demonstrated their machine so ably at the Jack Waite in December that the company purchased one and are now demonstrating at the Hecla.

Since starting work at the Hecla Monday the work of the drill has been witnessed by officials of the Federal Mining and Smelting company, Bunker Hill and Sullivan Mining and Concentrating company, Golconda and the Day interests in addition, of course, to the Hecla Mining company. The test hole at the Hecla will be completed soon, according to Mr. McClintock.

The demonstration at the Jack Waite was made December 12 to 18 at which time 149 feet were drilled at a cost of 62½ cents a foot. The drill progressed at the rate of about five feet an hour.

Outstanding Features.

Some of the outstanding features of the diamond drill according to Mr. McClintock, are the core recovery, because of the core barrel, its lightness and the fact that it can be operated by one man in contrast to the older and heavier type of diamond drill which required at least two and sometimes three men to operate.

The machine being demonstrated in the district was first put on the market in September, 1930. It is said to be the development of long experience and the result of over a year of concentrated experiment. It weighs 160 pounds. It is composed of two units, one of which weighs 82 pounds.

According to Mr. McClintock the diamond drill is so designed that it will fit on any standard rock drill bar and clamp and, like a rock drill, it is not necessary to cut out a large underground station as only five feet clearance from the collar of the hole is required. It will deliver a 13-16 or 3-4-inch core.

In connection with the light diamond drill the company has experimented with small white diamonds or bortz which, it is reported, have proven a satisfactory substitute for the higher priced black diamonds. A plan whereby ready set bits are furnished with the drill, which eliminates the necessity of having a diamond setter on the job, has been worked out, Mr. McClintock said.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Cheered by the welcome news from the steel and automobile industries as well as by the impressive strength of bonds and the firmness of commodities the stock market touched new highs for the recovery today before losing most of its gains in late profit taking and bear selling.

Rails, which led the rally, closed strong but leaders in the other groups, with few exceptions, were mostly lower. Few declines exceeded a point and the average loss for the 90 issues was less than one-half point. Activity improved over yesterday, sales totaling 2,140,190 shares.

From the steel trade came word that operations during the past week had eliminated the December shrinkage and steel shares, particularly independents, were considerably higher. An official report placed December automobile production not only above the November aggregate but over that of December, 1929, as well—an excellent showing. Inventories at the close of the year were down 25 per cent.

Extreme gains in the pivotal industrial and utility stocks ran to a point or so, which was considered satisfactory in view of the market's performance since the holidays.

Reduce Lead Price Again; Now $4.85

For the second time in less than a week the price of lead has been reduced by the American Smelting and Refining company of New York, according to word received here Wednesday morning. The latest reduction, of 15 cents per hundredweight, makes the price $4.85 per hundredweight. Monday the price was reduced from $5.10 to $5 a hundredweight. The price is the lowest since 1921, when the average for the year was 4.545 cents a pound, as compared with an average of well over six cents since 1922.

LOST GOLD IS TOPIC OF STUDY

A microscopic study of the form in which gold was lost in flotation experiments on an oxidized ore from the Tintic district, Utah, was recently made in the course of cooperative work between the United States bureau of mines and the University of Utah.

The result of this study established the fact that the gold in the flotation tailing was present in the metallic form and that the greater portion of the gold particles lost were smaller than 200 mesh.

A comparison of the gold particles in the tailing with those recovered in the concentrate showed that the surfaces of the majority of the particles lost were tarnished a brown color, but those in the concentrate were relatively clean and bright.

Although the exact nature of the tarnish on the gold in the tailings was not conclusively proved, it is easily readily removed by hydrochloric acid. This, and other evidence, indicates that it is probably an iron salt.

The fact that tarnished particles were lost in the tailing suggests that this condition may be common in gold-bearing oxidized ores and might, in many instances, account for the difficulty experienced in securing a high gold recovery by flotation. Tarnished or rusty gold does not appear to be readily floated with the reagents commonly used in the flotation of oxidized ores.

SULPHIDES MUST BE HIGHLY PURE

Although many metallic sulphides occur in nature in a relatively pure, and often beautifully crystallized state, the metallurgist is sometimes forced to make synthetic sulphides for special purposes requiring the highest purity, or for those metals whose sulphides are so readily attacked by atmospheric agencies that they are not to be found in nature.

An example of such requirements recently occurred in connection with the experimental study of the properties of metallurgically important materials being carried on at the Pacific experiment station of the United States bureau of mines, in cooperation with the University of California. It became necessary to prepare samples of pure sulphides of manganese, lime and iron for measurements of specific heats and other properties. These materials are important in connection with the refining of iron, but do not exist in the pure state in nature.

The ordinary method given in reference books for the preparation of these materials, such as direct combination between the metal and sulphur, reduction of the sulphate by reducing gases, precipitation methods in solutions, etc., all gave relatively impure products containing unoxidized or hydrolytic residues. It was not until a seldom mentioned method that of passing carbon disulphide vapor in an atmosphere of carbon dioxide over the oxide at elevated temperatures was tried, that successful preparations were obtained.

17 ARRESTS AS RESULT OF RAIDS

W. Zimmerman, Wallace, pleaded guilty to charges of liquor possession when arraigned in justice court Kellogg Tuesday night following the liquor raid in Shoshone county Monday night and Tuesday morning and was fined $100 and costs and given a 30-day suspended sentence.

His arrest brought the total to 17 arrested during the raid of nine federal prohibition agents and county officials. Fines assessed totaled $2,000 with five more warrants yet to be served.

GOVERNOR ROSS' MESSAGE

The message of Governor Ross differs from those of his predecessors in that he has introduced less subjects, however, his views are given in a concise manner leaving no doubt as to his stand on the issues.

He calls attention to the need of state and national cooperation in providing adequate watersheds and conservation of water for irrigation purposes and the eradication and control of crop pests. Too much attention can not be given at once to stamp out noxious weeds.

His recommendation that the University of Idaho make a study of byproducts, converting the waste timber into useful material is timely and the expenditure of money for this research work should prove of great value.

He exercised good judgment in avoiding technical questions regarding mining, but realizes the value of encouraging this great industry.

He advises making easy the ownership by municipalities of public utilities and advocates changes in the statutes to that end. One of the paramount issues he stresses is a more equitable distribution of taxes, which he describes as having become a burden, and his suggestion that a commission be appointed to make a comprehensive study and offer the next legislature a plan suitable to accomplish results, is an advance along constructive lines as is the plan to revert to the old system of the county officials collecting improvement taxes instead of city officials, as it now is a duplication of work and additional expense to the property owner.

One of the strong points of his message is the recommendation that an audit of the educational endowment fund be made and the state's interests be protected. He rightly points out that the two systems of selecting candidates for office can not continue.

This question will consume much of the time of the legislators during this session and should be definitely settled.

The recommendation that the judiciary be nonpartisan is wise. The advisability of reducing the number of district and supreme judges and reducing the public utilities commission is problematic but, as advised by the governor should be given studious consideration. It is true that men holding such important offices should be paid commensurate with their responsibilities.

The creation of an old-age pension is inevitable and the necessity of outlining plans is now pertinent.

The Veterans' Welfare commission was justly credited for its effective work by the governor and his advice that greater sums will be required in the future to care for war veterans and their families, is proper and should receive the hearty cooperation of every member of the legislative body.

Governor Ross' message portrays ability, careful study of conditions and unexcelled loyalty to his native state.

It is the duty of every citizen to cooperate in making the administration a period of outstanding advancement in the history of the state.

SCIENTIFIC LINGO

A newspaper reporter covering the annual convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science has had a terrible time with the scientific lingo but he concludes that, after all, science isn't so bad when you get into it.

Corralling a delegate who happened to be an old schoolmate and is now a learned doctor of something or other, the newspaper man said:

Doc, I'm beyond my depth and sinking for the third time. Tell me, on your honor, what's the lecture about that is entitled "Hexylresorcinol in the Treatment of Ascaris, Hookworm and Trichuris Infestations? I know what 'hookworm' means."

"Oh," replied the savant, "the first word is a germicide and all the title means is whether the stuff is good for hookworm."

"Then why didn't they say so?" insisted the reporter. The savant merely blinked and grinned.

"Doc," pursued the reporter, "remember the time we wired the old school bell? How would you say that in technical language?"

"Why," replied the learned man, "that would involve the dynamical problem of rendering an acoustical clarion nonfunctional."

MORE LYNCHING

The fact that lynchings in 1930 were twice as numerous as in 1929 is very discouraging. For some years mob murders had been steadily decreasing and many optimistic observers thought a year might come soon in which there would be none at all.

The outlook is not completely disheartening. Twenty-five or 30 years ago lynchings ran as high as 255 in one year. The set-back in 1930 need not be regarded as a start toward the return of any such ghastly figure as that. The sudden increase this year will doubtless spur private citizens, public officials and social organizations to further and stronger action against lynching.

A study of recent lynchings in the south shows that they occur usually in communities where the economic and educational standards are low. This suggests constructive work in education and social welfare.

"What's wrong with the colleges?" some one asks. Seems to us, the trouble is that nobody has yet figured out a way for every college to win most of the season's games.

LITTLE ACTIVITY AT BOARD MEETING

Gas Price Survey Shows Wallace to Pay More Per Gallon Than Any Other City in the Nation.

Reading of two communications, introduction of James F. McCarthy Jr. as a new member and discussion of routine business marked the regular meeting of the Board of Trade Wednesday noon in the Fremont cafe.

A. W. Hoover, reporting for the special gasoline committee, read from a gasoline price survey issued from the national headquarters of the American Automobile association which showed that at the time of the issuance of the report, February, 1929, the price of gasoline was a cent and a half higher than in any other city in the nation. The lowest price quoted was 12 cents a gallon with 28.5 cents a gallon being quoted for Wallace.

The secretary of the Public Utilities commission of the state advised the board of the application of Jerome Drumheller and associates to lay a pipe line across northern Idaho. The matter was referred to the special committee. A letter from the West Coast Lumbermen's association, asking support of senate bill No. 5370, was referred to the state affairs committee for action.

A. J. Dunn, reporting for the publicity committee, said that the supply of pamplets printed in cooperation with the Northern Pacific last year was exhausted but that another 10,000, with any desired changes noted, could be printed if desired. A meeting of the publicity committee is to be called soon to consider the proposal.

A motion to appoint a committee to draft a resolution prohibiting any discussion of political matters was withdrawn when discussion revealed that something of a similar nature was already in the by-laws or minutes.

It was revealed that the cost of installing the holiday street lights was $92.00.

Masked Longing

SYNOPSIS: Pavienne Gray's reckless folly brings disaster to her elder sister Aileen. Vivienne is a model for Dwight Channing, artist, who gives a gay party to celebrate Aileen's success as a star of a new show on Broadway. Vivienne, jealous of her sister's popularity, takes a dare to bathe in the fountain. Aileen trying to stop her, crashes through a glass door and is permanently disfigured. She has to retire from the stage, wearing a silk mask to conceal her scars. Jimmy Crane, a press agent who loves her tries to help solve her problems. Vivienne is faced with the burden of supporting both herself and Aileen. At Channing's studio she meets Arnold Kronberg, movie producer of doubtful reputation.

Chapter 15

A NEW CHANCE

EVEN when she was alone, Aileen wore the domino. It prevented chance glimpses of her face as she went about the apartment.

Now the mask was buried in her arms as she leaned against the table and sobbed convulsively. How much better it would have been if her accident had caused a fatal injury. And yet, it occurred to her instantly, that result might have driven Vivienne to lengths which it made her shudder even to contemplate.

Vivienne had been nervous—jumpy and disagreeable—all of the previous evening. Aileen really couldn't blame her. Viv had explained that she was through with her work at Channing. She had not gone into any details, and because she seemed morose, Aileen refrained from questions.

At breakfast, Vivienne toyed with her food. There was a hard look in her eyes—a glint which was new to Aileen. Aileen wondered whether she was concealing something from her. While Vivienne sipped her coffee, Aileen cautiously gave her several openings. No confidence had resulted. Viv's replies had been monosyllabic.

She dressed with particular care and put on too much make-up. When Aileen had suggested this her sister flew into a tantrum. She'd gone off on her rounds of the studios without even saying good-bye.

Deeply as that had hurt Aileen, her reaction was not bitter—not toward Vivienne anyway. She realized that on Vivienne's incompetent shoulders this new responsibility rested like a yoke.

Aileen removed the mask and wiped the tears from her eyes. Instantly, she replaced it—as though she had been guilty of an indiscretion. She loathed herself without it. With an effort she set to work again. Jimmy would come at two and she was making him a cake.

Now, because she wished to conceal her mood, Aileen slipped into a fetching suit of satin lounge pajamas. Just a touch of lipstick would serve to hide the droop at the corners of her mouth. Jimmy must not see that. Without exactly knowing why, Aileen grew elated.

When Jimmie arrived he had brought some of the latest records, and proceeded to try them out on her phonograph.

"Say!" He bit into the chocolate cake. "You'd make a fortune if you told the world this particular recipe. Just the same, I guess no one else could make a cake like you."

She liked praise of that sort from Jimmy. It was one thing that made him different from other men she knew. They would comment on her dancing—he, voice, her legs—her features.

"Do you know," Jimmy said, "I've been thinking. There ought to be a chance for you—with the growing demand for records."

"For me?" She laughed. "Don't be absurd."

"I'm not. Your voice ought to go over big. Aileen, unless I miss my guess, it has just the quality needed for recording. Why don't you let me arrange for a test?"

"Jimmy, you big-hearted idiot!" She reproved him gently. "I don't know whether I'd be good or not—but you must see that I couldn't—well, I just couldn't. That's all."

Jimmy had suspected that would be her answer and he was prepared for it.

"Look here!" His tone caused Aileen to start in surprise. "You don't mean that you're going to just sit back—and admit to yourself that you're licked? Are you going to let Vivienne hold the bag and spoil everything for her?"

"Jimmy!" The [illegible] Aileen's voice almost ma[illegible]lent.

"Any record stu[illegible]d be glad to give you a chance. It's not too late for you to cash in on the publicity you had as Miss Santa Claus."

"Do you think I'd ever sing that song—that any money would tempt me?"

He had touched her on the raw. It was almost as though he could see through her mask—as though she was showing him that her scars were deeper than her flesh. Jimmy had meant to cut her, but he felt like a cad. His only consolation was that he acted as he thought best—and this was no time to draw back.

"There are plenty of other songs. The point is that my suggestion might make you independent. You could keep this place without worry—about yourself—or Vivienne. That would give her the chance to strike out for herself—without being hampered by having—"

"Don't!" she begged. There was a long silence. Then, "Since you feel that I ought to—I'll try. Will you—arrange an appointment?"

"As soon as I can," he said. But even then he felt little joy.

If her voice-test happened to fail, or her records did not sell, what he had done would be far worse than if he had kept silent.

"I'm awfully glad," he told her and put out both his hands. With a gesture of confidence, hers slipped into his. Jimmy smiled and gently raised her to her feet. "Suppose we try out a song or two—just to get in practice."

Aileen went to the piano. As Jimmy ran through song after song, she found herself singing the choruses experimentally. For nearly an hour she lost herself and Jimmy kept on playing until he felt she would over-do if he did not stop.

"Bravo!" he cried and applauded smiling up at her. "Say! I've thought of something else. Maybe I could get a job as your accompanist."

"If you could—I shouldn't mind I mean it would help so much!"

"Listen, old dear!" he said confidently. "We're going to put it over You and I together."

"I know it," she answered. But there was a catch in her voice as she turned away from him. "Jimmy, if—It wasn't for you—I— don't know what I'd do!"

That capped the climax for him As a sort of amateur Simon Legree he thought he had done pretty well Now he had reached his limit Jumping up, he caught her to him For a moment he held her close; then kissed her tenderly.

"I couldn't help that!" He released her with a shade of apprehension. Aileen, however understood—even more than she let him know There was a happy curve to her lips Even the horrid reminder of her mask had vanished. Through its slits he read in her eyes something that he fancied was more than gratitude. But he smothered his own emotions. "Aileen, you're just bully!" he said. "I knew you'd be game!"

Jimmy hated to leave Aileen alone. He promised that he would call her early in the morning. Walking west through the early dusk, he wondered if he had been wise Why hadn't he asked her to marry him? Then he could look after her as he couldn't now. But reason told him that was why she would not have consented. For the present Aileen's pride was greater than any possible love she might have for him. And he was not by any means sure that her feeling for him was love. Not in the sense that he dreamed of it—as he ached for her.

A brownstone stoop with an iron gate beneath, lured him into an areaway and he paused there to push a button. Jimmy felt he could do with a drink. Going up the lone stair, he passed into the spacious and to the bar at the far end

Jimmy ordered an old-fashioned He glanced at the mirror behind the man who was preparing the mixture and gave his tie a twist. An other reflection in the glass attracted his attention. He caught a glimpse of a profile that must be Vivienne's. As she moved a trifle, he saw that it was, and in that moment he recognized the man who sat opposite her. It was Arnold Kronberg.

Vivienne's meeting with Kronberg has a sudden and startling climax in tomorrow's chapter.

ATTENTION OF VETS IS SOUGHT

The American Legion again invites the attention of all veterans of the World war to recent legislation of congress which permits the United States to grant, upon application to the Veterans' bureau and payment of the initial premium, government life insurance in any multiple of $500 and not less than $1000 nor more than $10,000 to any veteran of the World war who has heretofore applied for or been eligible to apply for government insurance, provided that such person is in good health and furnishes evidence satisfactory to the director to that effect.

The government is offering seven popular plans of insurance to meet the needs of the veteran. The policies participate in dividends and the premiums are based on the net rates and do not include any extra charge to cover the cost of administration. Further, the insured may designate any person, firm, corporation or legal entity as the beneficiary under his policy, either individually or as trustee. To date more than 35 million dollars in dividends have been distributed to holders of government insurance; there are approximately 650,000 policy holders with insurance in force in excess of three billion dollars.

Detailed information may be obtained from the United States Veterans' bureau, Washington, D. C., or at its regional offices located throughout the United States.

Four teams—Wallace Eagles, Twin City, Seeber Motors and Morning Mine—went into the Coeur d'Alene Valley basketball league lead as the result of initial games of the season played on Wallace and Kellogg courts Wednesday night.

The Wallace lodgemen, picked by many to win the 1931 pennant, found themselves after trailing at the end of the first quarter and administered a sound trouncing to the Kellogg Eagles, 40 to 15, on the Y. M. C. A. floor in Kellogg. The Twin City quintet, winners of the pennant for the last two years, took an early lead and held it to win from the Hercules Mill, 37 to 24, at Wallace.

The Seeber Motors defeated the Big Macs, 27 to 18, in a slow and listless game on the Kellogg maples while the Morning Mine and Wallace Firemen, new entries in the league this year, battled on the Wallace court with the miners winning, 28 to 12. The game between Rose Lake and the Mullan Drug, scheduled for Wednesday night, has been postponed until Saturday night.

Malcolm High Scorer.

Led by Malcolm, coach of the Burke high school who made his debut in the Coeur d'Alene Valley league by scoring 12 points, the Eagles had little trouble with their fellow lodgemen in the Smelter city, although things looked gloomy for the Wallace cagemen during the first quarter.

The local Eagles went into the second period on the tail end of a 4 to 3 count, but during the remainder of the half held their opponents scoreless and chalked up 14 more tallies to lead, 17 to 4, at the halftime.

Superior Teamwork.

Teamwork and superior passing and shooting enabled the Twin City to defeat the Hercules Mill. At the end of the first half the score was 25 to 14 and the Hardwaremen were able to maintain their margin of victory during the second half.

Day, Hercules forward, and Emmingham, Twin City forward, led the teams in scoring, each tallying five field baskets for a total of 10 points.

The Seeber Motors jumped into an early lead in its game with the Big Macs and by the end of the first half had run up a comfortable lead. During the last two periods, however, the Big Macs rallied to play the motormen on practically even terms.

The miners from Mullan scored seven points during the first quarter, compared to one for the firemen and then added 10 more points in the second period while the flame-eaters garnered one field goal. Seven more points were chalked up to the credit of the Morning city hoopsters in the third quarter and again the Firemen made only two.

The last quarter was the Firemen's with the Wallace quintet outscoring the Miners, 7 to 5. Smith, elongated Mullan center, former Mullan Teachers players, was high scorer with 11 points, Crowley and Rizzonelli led the Firemen in scoring with five points each.

VANDALS EXPECT GOOD TRACK TEAM

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO, MOSCOW, Jan. 8. —Coach Otto K. Anderson will issue his first call for Vandal trackmen at the beginning of the second semester shortly after February 1. Several members of the 1930 squad are back and these, bolstered by a strong group of sophomores and a few junior college transfers should give the Vandals a strong cinder path team.

Until weather permits the Vandals will work out in Lewis court. Anderson predicts that the Idaho team will be especially strong this season in the sprints, hurdles and the pole vault. He expects them to place higher in the conference than they have for several seasons. The Vandals first meet is scheduled with Whitman in Walla Walla, April 24.

IDAHO VANDALS MEET O. S. C.

Conference Season Less Than Week Away; Will Play Whitman Five This Saturday Night.

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO, MOSCOW, Jan. 8.—With the opening of the conference basketball season less than a week away, the Vandal hoopmen are holding nightly scrimmages under the direction of Coach Rich Fox. The Vandals will meet the Whitman college five on the Idaho floor Saturday night in the final non-conference game and will then await the invasion of the Oregon State college Beavers. The Vandals will meet the Staters Monday and Tuesday nights.

Idaho already has divided a two-game series with Whitman in Walla Walla and these teams appear nearly even. The Beavers, fresh from a successful barnstorming tour through California, open the conference season at Idaho, and if dope means much, the Vandals may be playing their two hardest games first. The Oregon State team is composed of several veterans with the addition of some capable sophomore stars. The University of California was among the victims of the Oregon school on their recent California trip.

The Vandals have a squad composed mainly of sophomores. Most of them are short but fast. Idaho has several accurate shots. Coach Fox is well satisfied with the early season work of his youngsters and expects them to make a good showing against the veterans from Corvallis. The starting guards against the Orangemen are not certain as Bill Hall and Bob Drummond are both nursing leg injuries. Stanton Hale, letterman, and Ed Lacey, a sphomore, may get the call if the two regulars do not start. Olean Smith will probably start at center, alternating with Kenneth Parks. Pete Wicks and Afton Barrett are most likely to be in at forwards in the conference opener.

Sport Slants

By ALAN GOULD

Associated Press Sports Editor

Bobby Jones and Big Bill Tilden, both bowing themselves out of the competitive sports picture into the motion pictures for 1931, leave a record of strange contrast, though each rose to the very pinnacle of achievement and fame in the performance of their specialties.

Tilden was a world's champion tennis player before Jones captured his first national golf title. Big Bill is nine years older than Bobby, but their chief accomplishments were spread through the same decade, the period of 1920-30 that has been the Glamorous and Clamerous Era of American sport.

Jones was a golf prodigy from the outset, gifted with doing the right thing naturally, but with a temperament that needed to be readjusted. Tilden, just fair as a schoolboy performer, was blessed with an unquenchable "will to win" from boyhood and sufficient persistence to master the stroking technique of tennis by prolonged practice. Tilden, as a result, was 27 when he won the National singles for the first time, Jones just 21 when he captured his first National Open.

Jones has quit competition at the very zenith of his powers, with all the world's major titles in his possession. Tilden has finally stepped out after many a stormy episode and after having passed the peak of his ability by a margin of at least three or four years.

It would have been bigger "news" if Tilden had quit amateur tennis when he made his last great stand in defense of the Davis cup in 1927. As a matter of fact, I believe Big Bill was persuaded not to solely through personal desire to help bring the famous tennis trophy back from France. Tilden loved a good tennis fight, and the French were able to accommodate him.

In the last few years Tilden has been able to muster only flashes of the form that made him a world's champion from 1920 through 1925. He admitted once himself that the old "will to win" was slipping a trifle.

Bo McMillin's hair is graying but the one-time All-America quarterback and field leader of the famous Praying Colonels of Centre college still can weave a mean hip or pluck a pass out of the air on the run. Under restricted conditions he gave a demonstration for the benefit of football coaches at their annual clinic in New York as part of a discussion of backfield technique.

"If there was any secret to whatever success I may have had, as a player," remarked Bo, "it was in planting my feet properly for the purposes of balance, plus position for going some place quickly."

My erstwhile colleague, Mr. Brian Bell, has always contended that the story of Mr. McMillin's first game against Harvard was one of the classics of football. Harvard won the game, but McMillin was the individual star of the fray, giving the Crimson plenty to worry about. As the game ended "Tiny" Maxwell, the referee, dived into the last pile-up of players, extracted the ball, turned to McMillin and said:

"Here's your ball, Mr. McMillin."

FIRPO-BELANGER FIGHT IS OFF

Monetary Difficulties Cause Split; Burke Bambino Will Battle Jimmy Hanna in Wyoming.

Young Firpo, Burke light heavyweight, will not be matched with Charley Belanger, Winnipeg battler who recently decisioned Leo Lomski over the 10-round route, George McKeown, manager of the Burke Wild Bull, announced Wednesday afternoon.

Firpo and Belanger were scheduled to fight in Portland January 29, but the bout was cancelled by McKeown when the Portland promoter failed to pay Firpo for a recent appearance in the Rose City.

Instead the Burke battler will sling gloves with Jimmy Hanna, Rock Springs rocker, who gave the Firp a wild evening 15 months ago in San Francisco. The Hanna-Firpo bout is slated to take place January 26, in Rock Springs, Wyo.

Firpo decisioned the Wyoming fighter in 10 rounds in the California arena, but then as Firpo reports, Hanna is far from a setup in any man's prize fight.

He is tall and rangy, weighs about 175 and packs a wallop in either hand. He has appeared in several recent San Francisco cards. Recently he has been giving the fans a treat in his own home town.

The Burke fighter is in excellent condition for the match and after working out for several days in the Coeur d'Alenes he plans to leave for the Wyoming city to put the finishing touches on his training grind. He is confident of a victory over Hanna, stating that he has shown marked improvement since he last met the Wyoming rocker.

DRIVER DROWNS IN NORTH FORK RIVER

Leaped Clear of Truck, But Dies When Caught Under Ice Near Linfor Wednesday.

Caught under the ice after leaping clear when his truck backed over a 15-foot embankment into 18 feet of water Guy Blansield, 32, Clarkston, Wash., drowned about 8 o'clock Wednesday morning in the North Fork of the Coeur d'Alene river about two miles east of Linfor.

The accident, which occurred at the scene of operations, was witnessed by H. Maxfield, a fellow employe of the James Tobin and Son road construction company on the Emville-Murray road, who had just told Blansield to dump the load. Blansield started backing the truck toward the edge, Maxfield said, and for some reason the truck failed to stop.

Realizing that the truck was carrying him over the edge Maxfield said that Blansield jumped clear as it went over. The mishap occurred about 8 a. m. and Blansield's body was found about 11:30 a. m. about ten feet away from the truck.

Blansield, who has been working for the road company for two months, is survived by his wife, Nettie, and mother, Mrs. Mary Blansield, of Clarkston and two brothers, Dave and Bing, both of whom have been working for the construction company for the last two years.

The body was taken to Stout's mortuary in Kellogg from where it will be shipped to Clarkston, Wash., for interment.

FOUR WOMEN ARE IN IDAHO LEGISLATURE

One is State's Sheep Queen, Another Is Hotel Owner; Third Politician; Fourth, Welfare Worker.

BOISE, Jan. 8. (AP)—The voice of four feminine legislators, the first to be heard in the legislative chambers in many a year, are heard at each roll call in the house this session.

All are representatives, two are republicans, two democrats. All are from southern Idaho. There their similarity ends.

The clerk calls out their names and reveals them as follows:

Mrs. Emma Yearian, Lemhi county, Idaho's sheep queen, republican.

Mrs. Emma Clouchek, Twin Falls, welfare worker, republican.

Mrs. Maude Cosho, Ada county, hotel manager, democrat.

Mrs. Myrtle Bernard, Canyon, politician, democrat.

Mrs. Yearian, mother of a large family, nationally known and perhaps internationally, is perhaps the most successful woman operator of a sheep business in the country.

She raises sheep by thousands, not just a barn yard flock, and negotiates with banks in sums with five zeros. Politicians in Lemhi county tried to get her husband to run for the senate so both of them could spend their time in the legislature.

Husband Cattleman.

He refused, insisting one was enough. In laughing good humor she always lays his opposition to the fact he was a cattleman before she went into the sheep business.

Mrs. Clouchek has been interested in welfare work for years. She has not announced any extensive welfare legislation she plans to sponsor but there are always a number of such matters coming before the law-makers at each session, all of which will draw her attention.

Mrs. Cosho operates one of the largest hotels in Boise. Her husband assists, and operates a string of taxicabs in addition. Tall and blonde, she campaigned strictly on the democratic platform formed at St. Anthony.

"Politicking" is not a new business to Mrs. Bernard. She is the only one of the four who has sought and won public office before. She has been in politics eight years. She says she has enjoyed them all.

When one of the republican women (name witheld) suggested that the legislature was expecting the four women to engage in a hair pulling contest, her democratic opponent replied:

"O, my no! With all these men opposing us we'll have to work together."

Perhaps they will.

RADIO STOLEN AT GARAGE IN KELLOGG

A Philco "baby grand" radio was stolen from the Turner Music company branch store in the Yost garage building at Kellogg Sunday night when thieves jimmied the back window of the garage and pried open the door to the display room, it was learned here Wednesday night.

The thieves overlooked $100 in cash in the cash register and took only the radio. After leaving the display room the burglars locked the door and made their getaway through the window they had pried open.

The incident was reported immediately to the Kellogg chief of police, but was not made public because an individual was suspected and the authorities did not want to warn him. Radio repair houses in Spokane and other parts of the Inland Empire have been notified to be on the lookout for the radio.

Mrs. Weniger charges irregularities in the conduct of the election in two Kellogg precincts which gave Sheriff Hendrickson enough votes to bring him from behind and give him a 62 vote margin of victory.

The Wallace Press-Times

Again has been chosen by one of the leading tobacco companies of the world to publish its advertising campaigns.

CREMO CIGARS
LUCKY STRIKE CIGARETTES
THE WALLACE PRESS-TIMES
ALL ARE LISTED "QUALITY PLUS"

The Proof

A commodity such as Cigars and Cigarettes, in order to achieve the popularity such as they enjoy—must have merit behind them—as without quality—advertising would only bring a temporary result. A newspaper, failing to bring results to National Advertisers does not receive renewal contracts

BUT ....

The Press-Times will again publish American Tobacco company and American Cigar company advertising and Lucky Strikes and Cremos will still be smoked in the Coeur d'Alenes.

THAT PROVES A THREE-WAY QUALITY

The following telegram was received at the Press-Times office:

1931 Looks Good to Us

New York, N. Y., January 5, 1931.

PRESS-TIMES, Wallace, Idaho:

The American Tobacco company and its subsidiary, the American Cigar company, open the new year by placing in the newspapers of the country the largest Lucky Strike advertising campaign and the largest Cremo cigar advertising campaign in the history of either company. Our agents are today forwarding you your orders for these campaigns. The great growth in the sale of these popular brands, Lucky Strike and Cremo, unprecedented in the tobacco industry—has been made possible by the power of newspaper advertising. We are again in 1931 increasing our newspaper advertising expenditure because we believe that this year like 1930 will be a year of bigger business with us. Frankly we do appreciate the power of public opinion generated through proper and intelligent newspaper advertising.

GEORGE W. HILL, President,
The American Tobacco Company.
